A Wild Adventure

I had a very strange dream last night. In my dream, I had packed my backpack with an old notebook and a wristwatch. Without making a sound, I sneaked out of the bedroom and out of the house. I got on my skateboard and headed to the seashore where you can see the famous lighthouse on the opposite side. The moonlight lightened up the sidewalk, and I made it safely to the beach. All of a sudden, a giant seagull the size of a van gulped me down, mistaking me for an earthworm. I was mixed in with seaweed and seawater inside the seagull's stomach, but thankfully, I was ejected out of its butt like fireworks. Now, I can't look at seagulls the same way, and cringe at the sight of them.
